DEMONSTRATION FOR PRESIDENT

President-elect Granville Arrives in Gettysburg amid Scene of Great Enthusiasm. Music and Noise. Parade.

'Mid the cheers of scores of college students and alumni, accompanied by the din of automobile horns, the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the ringing of the college bell, President-elect Granville of Gettysburg College reached town this morning and was given a reception which was as enthusiastic as it was unusual.

President Granville reached Gettysburg on the 10.45 train over the Philadelphia and Reading railroad and was met by a committee of the Board of Trustees, President Hefelbower, ex-President McKnight and scores of students and alumni. One cheer after another greeted the new executive head of the college and had it been "T. R." the greeting could scarcely have been more enthusiastic.

Headed by the Citizens' Band playing stirring march music the procession went over the principal streets of town. Three automobiles holding the president elect, the present president and ex-president, McKnight, together with the reception committee from the Board of Trustees, followed the band and they in turn were followed by a long line of students and alumni all wearing cards bearing the inscription "Welcome, President Granville."

The greeting received at the campus was no less enthusiastic and the welcome accorded the new head of the college kept up throughout the entire day. Remarkable unanimity of sentiment favoring Dr. Granville was manifested and he certainly enters his new field with the assurance of the support of the alumni and friends of the institution.

Dr. Granville will enter upon his formal duties shortly. His formal inauguration will likely take place in October.

Regular services at Mt. Joy next Sunday at 10.00 a. m., Sunday School at 9.00 a. m. Practicing for Children's Day Exercises on Friday evening.

DR. GRIMM TO STAY

Following the request of a committee from the Board of Trustees Dr. Karl J. Grimm, who resigned as professor of modern languages in Gettysburg College several weeks ago has reconsidered his action and will remain here instead of going to Ursinus College as he had intended. The faculty had also requested Dr. Grimm to stay at Gettysburg and his many friends and admirers are delighted with the success of the efforts of those at the institution.

The annual class day exercises of the graduating class took place on the campus Tuesday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd of people. In the evening Dr. and Mrs. Hefelbower held the reception to the alumni, students and friends of the institution. They were assisted in receiving by Dr. and Mrs. Bikle and Prof. and Mrs. Klinger. A number of class reunions and fraternity banquets were held and the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity gave a dance.

REAL ESTATE PURCHASES

Martin Winter has purchased from the McPherson estate a tract of land in the north end of town known formerly as the Kurtz property and containing about 25 acres, together with the buildings on the Harrisburg road. He has also bought a lot of ground fronting 72 feet on Carlisle street from Rev. H. W. McKnight. This adjoins lot of L. L. Taylor and he has purchased a lot of ground from Andrew Utz located in rear of the Dr. McKnight lot.

EXTENSION TO NEW OXFORD

Hanover and McSherrystown Street
Railway Files Route of Extension of Line From Conewago to New Oxford.

On Tuesday Governor Stuart approved a still further extension of the Hanover and McSherrystown Street Railway. The extension is from Conewago Chapel to New Oxford and will be in length about three and one half miles. The route laid out is as follows.

Beginning at a point on private lands in Mt. Pleasant township, approximately six hundred and fifty feet West of the centre of Conewago Creek, which said point is a point of connection with the present line of street railway of the Hanover & McSherrystown Street Railway Company now in the course of construction, and extending thence in said township of Mt. Pleasant in a generally Northwesterly direction over and upon private property acquired or to be acquired by this company to a point in Conewago Creek, the dividing line between the said township of Mt. Pleasant and the township of Oxford, thence crossing over said creek by a private bridge to be constructed by said street railway company and extending thence in a generally Northeastwardly direction in said township of Oxford over and upon private property acquired or to be acquired by said street railway company to a point on the Southern boundary line of the borough of New Oxford, which said boundary line is the dividing line between the said township of Oxford and the said borough of New Oxford; thence in a Northwesterly direction in said borough of New Oxford over and upon private property acquired or to be acquired by said street railway company to a point on High Street in the said borough of New Oxford at the intersection of High Street by Bolton street in said borough; thence in said borough of New Oxford crossing said High St.; and over, upon and along Bolton street in said borough in a Northwesterly direction to a point in Pitt street in said borough of New Oxford at its intersection with said Bolton street; thence in an Easterly direction in said borough of New Oxford upon, over, and along said Pitt street to the Western boundary line of the public square; in the said borough of New Oxford; and thence returning over the same route thus forming a continuous and a complete circuit, which extension or branch is of the approximate length of three and forty-five one-hundredths (3.45) miles and is wholly within the County of Adams and State of Pennsylvania.

KEPT WEDDING DARK SECRET

Miss Mary Wilson and Paul S. Miller Married at Cape May Several Months ago. Keet—Bruner Wedding.

On March 9, 1910, Miss Mary Steek Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wilson, of East Middle street, was united in marriage to Paul S. Miller, of Hanover, at Camden, New Jersey, by the Rev. D. J. Garrettson.

The secret of the wedding was kept about as successfully as possible and, in addition to the family and one or two friends of the bride, there was practically no one in town who knew anything of the event.

Mr. Miller graduated from Gettysburg College this morning. He recently refused an election as professor of mathematics in Le Mar College, Le Mar, Iowa. He has accepted the principalship of Glenville Academy, Glenville, York County.

On Friday Mr. and Mrs. Miller will leave for Asbury Park where they will stay until about August first after which they will reside at Glenville.

KEET-BRUNER

At 10.30 this morning a pretty home wedding took place at the City Hotel, when Miss Minnie Mae Bruner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Bruner was united in marriage to Dr. Wayne M. Keet, of this place.

The parlor, in which the wedding took place, was very prettily decorated with palms and roses. Miss Mary Duttonhofer, of Lancaster, played the wedding march and Rev. D. W. Woods performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white crepe fail trimmed with baby Irish lace and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The wedding was attended by only the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom. A luncheon was served afterward.

At three o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Keet left on the Reading for a trip to Chicago and other western cities. Mrs. Keet's going away suit was of blue French serge. They will reside at the City Hotel upon their return.

Among the out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Keet, Misses Fannie, Eleanor and Helena Keet, Martin Keet, of Harrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bruner, of Chambersburg; Dr. Samuel Bruner, of Greensburg; Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Spangler, of Lancaster; Henry Springer, of Sparrow's Point, Md.

RICE-SMITH

St. Mary's Catholic Church, McSherrystown, was the scene of an attractive wedding Tuesday morning when at a Solemn High Nuptial Mass at 7.30 o'clock, Dr. A. Curtis Rice and Miss Violet M. Smith were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George L. Rice, Jr., of St. Patrick's Church, York, a brother of the groom. The attendants were Robert E. Hart and Miss Annie L. Smith, sister of the bride.

Frederick and Robert Smith, Brooke Yantis and Frank Adams, were the ushers.

The bride is the youngest daughter of the late F. X. Smith, a well known cigar manufacturer of McSherrystown. She is a graduate of St. Joseph's Academy, and a talented musician. For several terms she taught in the McSherrystown parochial schools. The groom is the eldest son of Dr. George L. Rice, Sr., of McSherrystown, and is recognized as one of the most successful young practitioners in this section of the State. He was a widower, his first wife, who died several years ago, being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. McKinney, of McSherrystown.

Dr. and Mrs. Rice left on a week's wedding trip. On their return they will reside at No. 371 Main street, McSherrystown, the former home of the bride.

FORNEY-CRAWFORD

This evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Crawford, at Colmar, Montgomery County, their daughter, Miss Mary Crawford, and Mr. David J. Forney, of Gettysburg, will be united in marriage by the Rev. D. W. Woods.

TO THE TOWN MERCHANTS

The trade expansion tour of the Philadelphia Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association will arrive in Gettysburg by special train over the Western Maryland at eleven o'clock Thursday morning. All the town business men are requested to meet at the Court House promptly at 10.45. Upon the arrival of the train a brief and informal meeting will take place in the Court House which all are asked to attend. The remainder of the day will be spent by the Philadelphia visitors on the battlefield. It is important for the good of the town, that as large a number of local business men as possible be present at the meeting.

REPORTS WERE NOT EXAGGERATED

As Many Local People Are Testifying.

The Root Juice instructors made many lasting friends while here. Their wonderful remedy has done worlds of good at this point and reports of cures are being circulated from every direction. The drug store is more busy than ever wrapping up Root Juice and listening to the many flattering reports of the great good it is doing.

Mrs. Sarah Collins said: "I used to blout so at times I could hardly get my breath; sour gases would form in my stomach and dull, heavy headaches were at times so bad I felt I would go crazy; my tongue coated and I always had a bad taste in my mouth. My hands and feet were cold at times and at other times they would burn like fire, but thank my good stars, after hearing so much about Root Juice, I went to the drug store and bought a bottle of it and after using the first bottle I went back and bought two more bottles. I have used it all and don't think I will need any more, a I feel as well as I ever did in my life."

Root Juice seems to be good for any trouble of the stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels or blood. It is sold for one dollar a bottle or three for two dollars and a half at the People's drug store.

IT'S GRAND FOR THE HANDS.

One drop rubbed on rough, chapped, or work worn hands, heals, softens, smooths, that's MANOLINE; not only a dainty and pleasant preparation, but one that is highly beneficial and healthifying to the skin.

MANOLINE is absolutely as represented, if you find it otherwise, you can get your money back.

FARM OUTLOOK.

What a Prominent Granger Thinks About It.

Mr. George T. Powell, names Soil Depletion, Lack of Knowledge and Lack of Efficient Farm Labor as Among the Chief Obstacles to Successful Farming in the East.

One of the best known agricultural specialists of the eastern states is George T. Powell, whose grange connection is with Chatham (N. Y.) grange, No. 900, and who owns a large farm near Chatham, but whose office is in New York city. It is he who was among the first to be consulted by Columbia university authorities in regard to the establishment of an agricultural department in Columbia college, and he is assisting in developing their plans for it.

Mr. Powell was asked: "Do you consider the future more promising in its outlook for farming?"

"No if the present destructive, depleting, soil robbery policy is continued, but yes if the soil is rightly treated and its possibilities developed. Inside of ten years every acre of soil in New York and New England may be made to give 100 per cent of increase in yield of all crops now grown by tillage and clover with but a moderate outlay for fertilizer."

"What in your opinion is the greatest obstacle at the present time to successful farming?"

"Next to inadequate knowledge I should place lack of sufficient and efficient labor. Formerly the farmer who could use the most muscle was the most successful one, but with the competition that now has to be met from richer soil and from all parts of the world the farmer needs to study the most economical methods for improving his soil; he needs to study the demands of markets which in the past few years have greatly changed and to very much improve all methods of work on his farm. Under these changed conditions too many farmers are still holding the plow and doing other work that could be done by a man for $1.50 per day, yet they are perplexed to get the man. While economic conditions, the concentration of manufacturing enterprises so largely in our cities drawing the best labor of the country to cities, are responsible for much of the dearth of labor in the country, the farmer himself is also partly to blame. He does not provide steady employment for his farm help. He will pay for only seven or eight months' labor, with results that young men or men with families will not work on the farms for a part of a year and remain idle several months. They cannot afford to."

"Will you indicate, Mr. Powell, in one or two particulars how farmers bring upon themselves these unnecessary losses?"

"As an illustration, a farmer plants an orchard of apple trees. He does not take the time to study up his insect enemies and diseases. After eight or ten years he sees his trees begin to die off. On examination he finds the trees bored full of holes near the ground and girdled and dead. These trees at eight or ten years have cost money, time and labor, all of which are sacrificed at a time when the orchard should begin to produce an income of $5 worth of fruit to each tree, which means that the loss of each tree is not less than $200 for the income it cut off for twenty years, as it will take that time to replant and get the ruined trees replaced and paying $5 a piece again. Again, farmers do not study the manual value of the foods they raise or buy. They feed costly grain to their horses and cows and allow it to heat and burn out its value in the manure pile. The loss in these farm fertilizers in New York state on farms and in cities amounts to $50,000,000 annually."

FAR WEST GRANGES.

Washington State's Wonderful Grange Growth the Past Year.

C. E. Kegley, master of Washington state grange, is in every sense of the word a hustler. Through his activity and the able assistance of other state grange workers he has placed this far western state in the front rank so far as growth in grange membership is concerned. Fifty new subordinate granges having been organized in that state in a three months' period.

Two years ago there were less than ninety granges in the state; now there are about 200. Fifty-nine of them own their own halls, which are worth about $33,539. The rest meet in rented halls mostly, with some meeting in school-houses and homes of members. Fifty-nine granges report that they have co-operated in buying and selling arrangements. One hundred and eight report social activity. One hundred and seven report regular consideration of matters of public interest. Secretary Lewis says that it is these granges which report as above that are growing the fastest and exert the most influence in their localities.

Roseville grange of California owns a hall and a ten acre tract of land planted with eucalyptus trees.

The grange is growing finely.

GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN.

Highway Commission Reappointed in Ventura, Cal.

The supervisors in preparation for proposed bond issues in Ventura, Cal., have reappointed as county commissioners Messrs. Clark, Edmundson and Fleisher. This commission was appointed two years ago and went through the question of good roads throughout the county, furnishing specifications and an estimate.

But the financial depression has so worked that the county has not been able to raise the money to issue the bonds.

PREVENTING HOG CHOLERA

A government experiment station is issued the following bulletin on hog cholera, in which it lays out good methods for preventing the disease.

Proper methods of feeding and care are necessary in order to keep the herd in a healthy, growing condition. Healthy hogs possess a slight degree of resistance against disease, and this factor plays no small part in the control of hog cholera. Filthy, crowded quarters, lack of exercise and wrong methods of feeding overcome natural immunity and are secondary factors in the spread of disease.

There is no place on a farm where disinfectants are so necessary as in the hog houses and yards. White-wash, lime, chloride of lime and stock dips are the disinfectants commonly used. Pastures and lots may be cleaned up by moving the hogs for a few months each year and cleaning away all litter. The unused lots can be put to good use if plowed and sowed to some forage crop.

Necessary precautions against the food and drinking water becoming contaminated must be observed. The importance of clean water, clean feed and clean troughs and feeding floors should be emphasized. Muddy yards when in use a few years become filthy and endanger the health of the herd.

Yards should be well drained and all wallow holes filled. Pens and pastures through which the drainage from swine inclosures higher up runs should not be used.

Hogs coming from other herds or stock shows should be excluded from the home herd until they are positively shown to be free from disease. They should be quarantined in yards set off for this purpose. Such yards should not communicate in any way with the regular yards. They should also be cleaned by dipping or washing with a water solution of a reliable disinfectant, as there is a possibility of carrying germs in the dust and dirt on their bodies. The quarantine period should be longer than the average period of incubation. Three weeks is as long as is necessary.

The possible introduction of the disease into the pens by people, dogs, birds, etc., should be guarded against, especially if cholera is present in the neighborhood. Whenever it is necessary for a person to enter a hog lot where the disease is present the shoes should be cleaned and disinfected on leaving. Persons taking care of cholera hogs should observe the necessary precautions against the distribution of the disease and see that others practice like precautions.

FEEDING THE PIGS.

Peculiarities of Animals' Structure Necessitate Concentrated Foods.

A small stomach and an extensive intestinal canal are peculiarities of the pig's structure which have to be considered in the matter of feeding in the opinion of a prominent swine herder. The smallness of the stomach indicates the necessity of concentrated food, and the large intestinal canal points to the fact that a large quantity of food can be disposed of.

While it is obvious, however, that concentrated food is adapted to the pig's organism, it is inadvisable that it should be given an unlimited diet of this food. Potatoes, etc., may not be so excellent for the purposes of development as barley meal, but a certain quantity of these not only reduces the feeding bill, but diminishes the risk of overfeeding.

Recent experiments have shown that fattening pigs should be fed at least three times a day, and a third meal, given as late in the evening as possible, should be the heaviest. The roots which suit pigs best are swedes and potatoes.

We have known cases where cabbages have been fed to fatten pigs, but they are of no use. Skim milk, barley meal and potatoes are excellent for pushing the carcass along, but there does not appear to be much advantage in boiling the tubers.

Carrots For Cattle.

Those who have one or two cows and a piece of ground that may be tilled should not fail to sow a few rows of half long carrot seed. If sown by hand the seed should be scattered so as to make a row of a couple of inches broad. They may be sown fifteen to sixteen inches apart. Keep them clean, but do not thin them when the seed has been prudently sown. When autumn comes the amount of good food furnished will be a matter of surprise. Until freezing weather the carrots may be simply pulled up and fed without chopping or slicing.

Alfalfa Is Excellent Feed.

Alfalfa is an excellent feeding stuff where it can be obtained. Hogs relish it either when green or when it has been properly cured for hay. It is very helpful if the brood sow has access to pasture. It not only helps provide the proper food, but it affords a place for exercise which is very essential.

Alfalfa is discharged. Since then agitation has been started for a renewal, and a proposition has been set on foot to bond the county for $1,000,000 for good roads and a number of bridges. The commission is empowered to again retain Surveyor Wand at a salary of not to exceed $100 per month.

The matter of a choice of a courthouse site in Ventura has been selected by the supervisors. Citizens have raised a purse of $2,000 with which to buy a site, the location being left to the supervisors. Two sites have already been offered.

"EXPERIENCE THE BEST TEACHER."

If you have heard it once you have heard it a hundred times. "Experience is the best teacher."

To make his mark today a man must have a practical education, and to get this he must go "through the mill."

There is a poetical, an ornamental, a beautiful side to life, and, we may also add, a theoretical side, but most of life must be spent in the workshop where practical results are produced or life is a failure.

There are books on religion, but what is religion without practice? There are books on medicine, law, agriculture, poultry culture, and every man should have and love his library.

But the day comes in every man's life when he says: "It's not all found in books. They are helpful, but experience is the best teacher."

A BROODER SCREEN.

A hen hatched chick may be born with crawlers, but he's born with a silver spoon in his mouth when compared with the bird born in a hot box. His mamma mollicodies him, feeds him, instructs him in the mysteries of worm and bugology, warns him of the bogies that beset little roosters, and he always has a nice warm house walking along with him, and where mother spreads her wing, behold, there is home.

But the brooder chick must often say, "What is home without a mother?"

He is really a self made rooster. Thus, having no heated home legging after him around the lot, he must find his way back and is apt to stray.

Thus before turning him loose on the world it is wise to have him play in a brooder front yard until he becomes accustomed to the place.

For this purpose we use screen coops six feet square, fifteen inches high, with a frame made of 1 by 2 inch stuff, covered with lath mesh. The open end fits the brooder, and we often string six of these screens in a row, and then the chicks have a run 6 by 36 feet.

This is the correct size for hen and chicks also, and here the brood is safe from pests.

As some keep old and young stock on the same ground, the old birds rob the chicks at feed time.

By placing a block under the corners of this screen to afford entrance the chicks may feed underneath at pleasure and get their share in peace.

FEATHERS AND EGG SHELLS.

Robins at 10 cents a dozen is one thing seen in Tennessee markets that surprises northern bird lovers. It is claimed 150,000 have been slaughtered for this paltry price in three weeks. They are killed at their roosts, one man killing 2,000 of these insectivorous birds in a night. That act would have cost him $25,000 in Pennsylvania.

Hens fed on corn alone lay a flabby egg, deficient in cell structure, weak in fertility, and healthy chicks from such eggs are very few.

Salt poisoning and diarrhea often follow the feeding of scraps from hotel tables. The mixture contains acid vinegar, salty meat scraps and mustard and is nearly always fermented before the hens rummage through it.

A Lancaster (Pa.) tenant adopted a new way to pay rent which he stole the landlord's chickens and with the proceeds settled his arrears. He received nine months' free lodging for the act.

Chicago is the great cold storage center of the United States. Its egg warehouses have a capacity for 1,000,000 cases. A case contains thirty dozen, and it cost 30 cents a case for the storage period, April to January.

Seventy-two million eggs were taken off the Chicago market on April 7 to keep up the retail price, and agents were hustling all over the central west to gather in the eggs for the trust so they might not reach the city and be sold to the people at a reasonable price. And yet we say, "We are the people."

In the time of Audubon wild turkeys weighing twelve pounds were sold in market at threepence (6 cents) each. In the last fifty years this noble bird has been almost wiped off the map.

What a hen eats a year depends on the breed and strain of chicken, whether she is a layer or loafer, on the climate, on the way she is housed, on her age, on what she adds to her ration for foraging, on the kind and quality of feed, on the hen's vigor and on the fellow that does the feeding and for what purpose she is fed. Hens on free range eat from sixty to ninety pounds of supplied feed when a systematic method is used.

Pomona and subordinate granges in Maine are placing themselves squarely on record against the hump of free seed delivery and in favor of the parcels post. Whatever merit there has been in the free seeds, the day is gone for the farmers to use these relics of a prehistoric age when pure seeds are so easily and cheaply obtained. If experimental work is desired, then the whole system should be revised. As the Patrons of Industry and Sagadahoc say, "Cut out the free seeds and give us the parcels post," and the cry will go up until the petition is granted.

I GOT EVEN WITH BOTH

By T. ANTHONY TWining

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

My uncle, George Chatsworth, was a very eccentric man. As he grew older his eccentricity exhibited itself in violent prejudices. He disliked everything that was in his time and advocated anything that was not. He was very rich and had no children. I was his only living relative and his heir expectant. My position was rather trying. I must agree with him in all his odd ideas or run the risk of offending him and thereby losing a fortune.

The most deep seated prejudice of my uncle was against the medical profession. When ill he would not have a doctor near him. In this I felt it my duty to interfere, and on one occasion, taking the matter into my own hands, I sent for a physician. My uncle ordered him out of the house and was so wrath with me that I feared he would change his will, cutting me off entirely.

He changed his will, but did not cut me off. He put in a codicil that if when he again at any time fell ill I should call in a doctor his property should all go to an old friend of his who had as many violent prejudices as he had himself. This old fellow, Peter Newman, always took the opposite side of every question from that taken by my uncle and had no fear in forcing his opinions. The strange case of these two curmudgeons being warm friends was like two opposing winds meeting and clinging to each other in a cyclone. I was told of this provision of my uncle's will, but Mr. Newman was not. Since my uncle abused the doctors his friend defended them. I think my uncle did not dare tell Newman that he had disinherited me in case I did what he would approve.

Well, my uncle was taken down with a malady which was sure to kill him if he did not have medical attendance, and he would probably die anyway. I confess I was not anxious that he should live, but his injunction that I should not call in a doctor placed me in a very delicate position. No one but I knew of the conditions of his will, and if it became known I would be hated by friends, neighbors and relatives for permitting the old man to die rather than oppose him by calling in medical attendance. But it was I who was to be rich or remain in poverty and not they. I omitted to call a doctor, nor did I give the real reason for not doing so—that I would lose an inheritance if I did.

As soon as it was known that my uncle was dangerously ill people began to wonder that I did not call in a doctor. Then they began to ask me the reason. When I told them my uncle would not have a doctor they all agreed that it was my duty to force one upon him. From that they passed to insinuating that I wished him to die that I might get his money. Finally threats were made that if I didn't "do my duty" word would be sent to the police that I was slowly murdering my uncle in order to possess myself of his millions. The strain became so great that I think it fortunate I might have yielded if his fortune would have gone to any one else than old Newman, whom I hated.

Finally Newman himself, having heard of his friend's illness, came around to see him. Uncle was too ill for his friend to attempt to force a doctor upon him, but Newman had no sooner left the sickroom than he loosened his tongue upon me, bringing forth imprecations upon me for permitting my uncle to die for the sake of coming into my inheritance.

"Can't you wait a few years, you young villain, for a fortune that will surely be yours? One would suppose that if only for the sake of appearances you would give him the medical attendance he needs. He will probably die of this illness anyway, and you'll get the money. Then why not do your duty?"

"I will not take the responsibility," I said, "of disobeying my uncle's wishes."

"Then I will take steps to make you disobey his wishes, since it is evident by your desire to let him die for a purpose. I shall at once make this matter known to the authorities. I shall bring a charge against you of willfully."

He was moving away when I stopped him. "Hold!" I said. "You are my uncle's best friend, aren't you?"

"I am."

"Well, will you take the responsibility of calling in a doctor?"

"I will."

"Then sit down and write out an order for any doctor you wish to call and I will take it myself."

"I'm not afraid of the old man," he said, his face red and blue with indignation, and, sitting down at my desk, he wrote the order. I carried it myself and after showing it to the doctor put it in my pocket.

My uncle died, and a few days after the will was opened I met Mr. Newman on the street. He knew of the codicil and how he had unwillingly prevented the possibility of his inheriting his friend's money. He gave me a grim look and passed me without any other recognition.

My uncle had not stopped to think that in forcing me to keep the doctors away from him he was conferring a benefit upon me. He was a very estimable man, but I was not sorry to part with him, and was much pleased to get even with his counterpart.
